

THE LAST meeting of the National Colored Press Association, held at Louisville, Ky., was not a success by any means. Our strongest and best papers seem to have ignored the fact that such an organization is in existence. If one is to judge the organization by its officers, and its officers by their papers, the organization is not worthy of much attention.